Der John Jacob Astor Award in Library and Information Science wird 2010 zum achten Mal durch die Checkpoint Charlie Stiftung in Berlin vergeben. Die „Initiative Fortbildung ... e.V.“ - sie ist hier Kooperationspartnerin - ist begeistert, in diesem Zusammenhang zu einem Workshop mit Donna Scheeder, Deputy Chief Information Officer, Congressional Research Service, Library of Congress, der diesjährigen Preisträgerin, einladen zu können.

Der Workshop - seine Inhalte beziehen sich selbstverständlich nicht nur auf Parlaments- und Behördenbibliotheken - findet in amerikanischer Sprache statt, entsprechend erfolgt seine Ankündigung:

The pace of technological change has not slowed but has possibly even accelerated. Along with this change, new generations of library users bring different expectations to their search for information and knowledge. In order to build and maintain vibrant and relevant library and information services, library leaders need to be trend conscious planners who can innovate and build internal organizational support for their strategic path to the future. This workshop will take participants through the steps necessary to identify trends that will determine what's next in meeting user needs, the various methods of user needs assessment, and doing a SWOT analysis.

Good ideas are not enough. Good managers must have the personal political skills to get their proposals approved and funded. The final session will discuss successful methods for influencing others.
